Peace Isn't Private Property

CANADA'S engagement with the Big Four depends chiefly on dealing the German peace treaty was no more secure of immediate victory. Here's what happened.

Despite what in London to prevent drafts for the real Big Four meeting in Moscow. They wanted it similar conditions to exist in western states, with and without of demand, as the treaties with Germany and Austria.

Canada didn't think this good enough and suggested that smaller powers be given a share in the early countries work.

That suggestion was ignored. Our High Commissioner, Norman Robertson, was then instructed to ask the Russians a question.

"If Canada does support before you can you agree to that this will not be our last chance to say anything about the German treaty?"

Still no reply. It became evident that at least one of the Big Four would prefer to answer "No." The German treaty was a matter for great powers who had "paid in blood," and it should be neither one nor the other.

It was not for that that Canada put three questions of a million men in two, fought in every Western European front, spent $24 billion in materials to arm, including Russia, who needed more than they could pay for.

It was not for that, either, that Greece starved and Poland suffered, that Yugoslavia passed to German domination. That to be told at the end of the "Run along now, we don't need you again until next time. If you have any ideas about the peace, write a letter to our committee."

We fought for peace as an essential ethical moment. We did not fight to maintain a balance of power, to serve any imperial interest anywhere in the world. We fought for our lives, which the international politics of great powers had put in jeopardy.

Now that the fighting is done, we must have a real voice in the shaping of that peace for which we fought. We have as interest in it as well as the great powers—if we have not, we should have stayed home.

Canada, moreover, has one qualification which is almost unique, to fit her for this task. We are one of the very few powers unscathed at World War II who have no direct, immediate interest in any question of detail.

We don't care whether a boundary runs on the side or the other of a certain town or hill or river, we mean no mischief, we have need to do no great in reparations.

But we do have an overwhelming interest in the preservation of peace.

That is why we demand an effective share in the making of the peace treaty. The Canadian Government did well to make its position clear from the start.

yet, but Canada's action, not a loose confidence of ours or too hostile state. It's time they began to act accordingly.

The Red Cross Reconverts

DURING the six war years Canadians gave the Red Cross more money and more blood donations per capita than did the people of any other nation.

The magnitude of the Canadian Red Cross Society's wartime program has left it with a tremendous problem of comparable magnitude. Under the War Charities Act the Society's share of funds must be spent on war relief quite liberally, the Society is steering down towards the financing of its domestic peacetime activities.

These activities in 1947 will include a civilian blood transfusion service for Canada, the maintenance and extension of a system of outposts hospitals in our frontier areas, a $1,500,000 old persons program, donation of the 600,000 Junior Red Cross members who make up Canada's largest youth organization.

The total cost will be over $5 millions. That's the target for a new appeal which the Canadian Red Cross is currently launching on March 1. Having done so well for and through the Red Cross in the past, Canadians scarcely need to be reminded how essential it is that the goal be met.

"I STARTED IT THIS YEAR!"

This year the eyes of thousands of Canadian school children will be opened for the first time to the wonders of Chemistry.

Yes, yes, you're now meeting up with familiar old tales, but chemistry has been with you all your life. In one form or another it has guided your health, helped to feed and clothe you and provided many of the things that have made your young career so useful.

Now you are learning how this great science works. Your first simple experiments are the roots from which spring such basic products as chlorine to purify water, fertilizers to stimulate plant growth, caustic soda to kill pests and guard crops, and paint to protect and beautify. You know about nylon, honey, for example. The same science is made in a fundamental, so strong that it is used for filling bus bodies and house roof trusses.

Chemistry never stands still. It is constantly working for and finding new and better products. For this is a chemical world and the C.I.D. (Unit is the symbol of an organization devoted to saving humanity through chemistry).

For Interest: PLASTIC WOOD

HERE is another product of Chemistry for home, and industrial use, in both holes and cracks in wood. It handles like putty, behaves like wood, with which it makes perfect union.

Include storage space for all types of wiring for safety and light in each room and the various electrical outlets for radio, electric, and other uses.

It is the best place for wiring, without outlets for all types of radio, electric, and other uses. It is the best place for wiring, without outlets for all types of radio, electric, and other uses.

Part of light wiring, where you need it in the kitchen, and you need enough outlets to cover the needs of the electric, and the house.

ADEQUATE WIRING

the first step to Better Electrical Living

Electrical living starts with the wiring system. Whether building or remodeling, look to the wiring. Ask your Electrical Contractor . . . Will the wiring system carry an electric range, water heater and power all appliances to work efficiently without overloading? Are there enough outlets and outlets for convenience and comfort? When the answer to yes, you will be able to enjoy to the full the economy and freedom pleasure of electrical living.

GENERAL ELECTRIC WIRING MATERIALS

You should make certain that all wiring is done with quality materials. Specify G-E products to your contractor. He will be glad to use only the best. The difference in cost between bargain wiring and that of the highest quality is a very small percentage of home cost. Your electrical contractor can show you why a first-class wiring job, with G-E wiring materials will save you money . . . why it will serve for years without replacement . . . and why it increases the value of your house.

It is the best place for wiring, without outlets for all types of radio, electric, and other uses. It is the best place for wiring, without outlets for all types of radio, electric, and other uses.

THE SUPPLY OF WIRING MATERIALS

In the past years the supply of wiring materials has been limited. The war has increased demand. However, we look for a gradual increase during 1942.

Peace Is Inevitable

says MAX WERNER

PEACE is inevitable. I am so deeply convinced that peace is inevitable now as I am deeply convinced in the future that war was inevitable.

This conviction has grown upon me after thorough investigation. I recently visited the peacekeeping capital—London, Paris, Washington, New York, with those results in Great Britain and France. I attended the Peace Conference in Paris, then attended the Security Council, the United Nations Assembly and the Foreign Ministers Conference in New York, by Washington I attended my impression of war inevitability.

On the occasion I have talked with—well, I cannot list a broad variety of politicians, political leaders, experts of several nations. The panel may from America, Britain, Canada's Conservative Minister of Information, to the British R. B. C. Committee, leader of the parliamentary william within the Labor Party, from Yugoslavia to Mexico to France's permanent expert on sciences.

"For decades Britain's main interest will be re-organized."

United States—Poland, from France's Minister of Foreign Affairs, from Britain's Foreign Minister, to Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister, to France.

I did not believe in war in 1940. The appearance of the last year seemed like it was, and the same today. My conviction has been confirmed by every phase of my investigation. To be so positive as I am I'd like to make two qualifications.

First, The inevitability of peace does not mean a chaotic international life. Indeed, there will be freedom and justice, and even more danger. But—there will be no more war in peace.

Secondly, The certainty of peace does not necessarily mean that the world will have a good peace. There may be injustice, violence, or even war. However, the situation of our time is not war or peace.

The situation of our time is good peace or bad peace. In the future it will be a tremendous difference.

Three factors define the situation of the world. The first is the situation of the war in the future, the second is the situation of the peace in the future, the third is the situation of the war in the future. I have discussed and analyzed them. They do not say justice. However, they do say in the same direction, and so a whole they are favorable to the preservation of the peace.

I shall start my "travel into peace" with Great Britain.

Great Britain is a peace factor. Considering the strategic position of Great Britain in the world and her political weight, this is a fact of tremendous importance—one of the most important international facts of our time. The British will be peace in action, active and realistic. The British of today is not a fighting expanding empire and not a country of strategic importance and imperial possessions. She is, above all, a hard-working people. Continued on page 8

One thing is certain, we laugh loudest at the weaknesses of people we don't like. The show of who makes a mistake will get laughed at much more than a student who is asked that same mistake. And experiments have shown that people are more amused by jokes when they are at the expense of the opposite sex. It all adds up to the fact that you are likely to be laughed at. It's a universal truth, or women who are laugh at a joke when he is the one making and it's.

And what about animals? Most animals are thought to be only animals that laugh. Some look as if they are laughing, but this appearance is due to the curve of the mouth of the mouth. Most animals make short dogs laugh, but they laugh with their teeth.

Humans always bring up the question of the laughing system. Don't they laugh? The answer is no. The system goes through a series of stages that are not like humans—Continued on page 10

IT IS AN Indian boy of genuine dimensions, whose hair, neither the shield of Savary nor the red star which the Portuguese feel to be more fitting. The NHL's studded with stars from Winnipeg's Olympic rink where players get frostbite and the cash intake is sometimes nil.

Close to 40 other Olympic athletes are either now playing or have played hockey for a living in the National Hockey League. The rink's lower profile has been the linchpin of water-logged professional unemployment relief, another lesson all the way from California to Scotland. In the last 10 years, junior league coaches almost exclusively of former players who played their first professional hockey at the Olympic level were an Olympic phenomenon. In the early 1980s, the Montreal Canadiens were two national senior championships by the simple expedient of being a previous benefit of Olympic old boys at the young amateur level and blinding them with a succession of imported talent from major rinks of the mature.

The thwack of the hushman's axe begins the flow of wood and wood products from New Brunswick's forests. This industry alone sets more than fifty million dollars to work within the province annually. New Brunswick's salt water fishing is worth more than eleven million dollars yearly. Agriculture is a near fifty-million-dollar industry. Iron products, vegetable products mean a further twenty-five million dollars to New Brunswick.
